Synopsis

He knows she's here, somewhere close by, so why can't he find her? Can fate really be so cruel? Harlan can sense his mate. He has sensed her for months, and yet he can't find her. Is he too old? Are his senses failing? Maybe it's his imagination. Maybe it's time to leave Bear Creek, and all his hopes behind. Fiona has hidden away for centuries. Only when she met the people of Bear Creek and learned to trust them, did she dare reveal her other side. Only here has she acknowledged she is a dragon shifter. That's what love does to a person, it allows them to be themselves. It allows them to trust, to believe. But something is stirring out there. Something that calls to her heart and her soul. She knows it's time to reveal her true self. Whatever the cost. And, from experience, Fiona knows the cost only too well. Just when it looks as if she is going to get her own happy ever after, fate has one more hand to play. Two girls are handed to social services by their stepmother. It's not unusual, Fiona has seen it many times before. "Five hundred and thirty-one" to be exact. But these two girls are special. Very special, and Fiona will sacrifice everything to give them the home they need. Will her mate feel the same way? Or will she have to make the ultimate sacrifice?

Customer Reviews

I've not finished this book yet, but so far it's wonderful. I have one suggestion for the author, who seems to write like I do. When you go back and edit your work, please look at the use of contractions. I write 'I am' and 'they are' a lot to keep the usual problems with contractions out of my writing, and when I edit it, I think of the way the person talks. Do they habitually use them? Or are they one of those types who don't? If they use them, I change it all through the book. I also change it for my own text, where it's not a person talking. For those of you who are reading the comments to decide if you want to take a chance on this book, get it, read it, enjoy it. I love that the two MCs are not perfect, that they are older, and yet their passion is real. So, back to it. I want to see how it ends!

Fiona got her mate and her HEA. And this story did not let me down. Fiona is a dragon in hiding. Harlan can sense his mate but not pinpoint her exact spot. Both are lonely, centuries old dragons who believe they are the last of their kind. Imagine their surprise when they find each other and because of Fiona's job as a social worker for special children, come across to orphaned girl dragons that need parents. Can they go from single to a family in the blink of an eye?

He keeps feeling his mate but he can't find her, then he feels her really near. She had worn the ring for ages to protect herself from being caught. One day she took it off and felt her mate. How wonderful to love and be loved. But there were problems, would he help or hinder. It is a very good read.

Like in the song Puff the magic dragon, dragons live forever, but kids grow up. The books have to be read for the magic to rub off on each reader. I have read a ton of books by Ms. Raines and have been a fan from the first book. Each is different, yet the love of family is at the base of each one.

What a beautiful story. Wow this story was wonderful and full of interesting twists. Bear Creek is a absolutely a great place to be. These stories are so clear that you can picture the town and all the mountains that surround the town. I hope that there will be more of Bear Creek.

This whole collection was good, but this one was just awesome! Now we need to get Sam and Suzie together and more dragons, yes please, more dragons. And the mysterious Mrs. Duncanson, oooooooo what's her story? LOL, lordy these books are fun!

Happily ever after all around! Fiona finally has her story. Harlen sure is a silver fox... err dragon. Nice to see Sam again. Love that key characters come back around from Bear Bluff and Bear Creek.

Finally an older couple who can enjoy a happily ever after. Wonderful story with the Dragons having a great outcome. Fiona really deserves to be happy after all the children she's helped.
