Garry Hunter is a professional photographer and independent curator. Based in London, he is the founder and Creative Director of the Fitzrovia Noir community arts initiative, a group that specializes in installations in non-gallery spaces and urban sites undergoing major transition. His passion for street art has taken him all over the world, and he is a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society.

Given the objectives of the volume; i.e. exemplification of the different methods, and materials used in street art (paint, stencil, 3D, miniatures, etc.) the author did a credible job in illustrating its variations across a number of countries (hardly 'the world'), while also engaging and illustrating the work of some of our leading artists. Focusing on artistic conception of some current human condition, the author illustrates by works of artists like blek le art, c215, evol, shepard fairey, eva, gaia, blu, roa, jimmy c, os gemeos, and others. A rather monumental task done quite well.

This is a wonderful look at the most current street art being created worldwide at the moment. From the large scope stencil works that cover a building wall, to the minute works that go no larger than 6" and have to be discovered at the base of an outside wall on a city building, Hunter chronicles it all.

Some political observations, some just creative and ironic statements about urban life, this book serves it all up.

Bought this for a teenage boy for a gift. He loves it.

Great book and shipping was great!
