I Hear (Baby Beginner Board Books)

Synopsis

Helen Oxenbury's brilliant board books have delighted a generation of babies. Now from the most widely loved of artists comes a reissue of a board book to help very young children explore their worlds. In I HEAR, a baby listens to a bird sing, a dog bark, and a watch tick. Full of character and humor, this charming book forms a winsome introduction to the senses.

Customer Reviews

Great book for wee ones. The images are realistic and simple. I love that these books aren't busy like so many books. It helps my daughter focus on one thing at a time to have simple things to look at. This will also be great when she is first learning words.

All in this series are great for age 1-2

These simple board books by Helen Oxenbury are great. The little ones who are learning the names of things love them. I purchased them for a grandchild, who loved them so much that when she outgrew them, they were saved for the next baby in the family. They were so loved that they were loved to death. I finally replaced them for grandchild number 4. When the new ones came, the 2 year old sat down with his baby brother, to "read" them to him.

Excellent books for very young children

Not what I was hoping for, it was hard for me to make some of the noises so my baby would understand.

Excellent book for baby but VERY difficult to find!

I love this book because it is simple and focuses on the senses...which young children are really experiencing and its just concise and very nice:) Little ones love it.

I bought I HEAR on the recommendation of a Montessori educator I very much respect. They highly recommended Helen Oxenbury's series of four books about the senses. The illustrations are nice, and the design (one picture per page with two pages for each word) is great for learning to read and enjoy books. The one downside to this book is that out of six words, two are dated choices for "sound" words (which means that your baby is not likely to see/hear a real world example). One of those is "watch." The watch shown is an analog watch, with the expected sound is "tick tick." However, everyone I know has a soundless watch, either quartz or digital. Less annoying is the fact the the telephone shown has a rotary dial. It's a nice book, but I HEAR is not a book my 10-month-old son pulls out to read very often. Our 22-month-old friend does not get excited about this one, so the appeal may be limited to younger babies.
