Stephanie Calmenson is the author of Dinner at the Panda Palace and May I Pet Your Dog? She grew up in Brooklyn, New York, and was an early childhood teacher turned children's book editor before she began to write her own children's books. Puy Pinillos is an illustrator living in Bristol, England. She graduated with a degree in Fine Art and aims to create fun books that children can learn from.

I bought this book for my 21 month old daughter who recently became enthralled with flowers. She loves this book! The pictures are bright and colorful, and each page gives a brief description of a different flower in rhyming format. I even learned some new things about flowers myself!

My 2 1/2 year old grandson really likes it.

This is my nieces favorite book right now. She loves the stinky flower (corpse flower) Thinks it's hilarious! She has a new fascination with anything that grows in the backyard now.

Look! Flowers! is a wonderfully written, beautifully illustrated board book dedicated to the beauty and diversity of the floral kingdom. Squarely aimed at the youngest of audiences, this is the rare work of nonfiction for this age group that entertains and educates in equal measure. The solid board book construction guarantees that this will withstand lots of repeat reads as your child grows and begins to appreciate different aspects of the book. Each page features a different flower and a short rhyme that reveals a fun fact about the flower or a special attribute. The writing is smooth and manages to give a whimsical feel to each flower fact. The illustrations in this book are truly magical. They have a level of depth and nuance that is unusual for the board book crowd. The final gate fold brings in even more flowers and their names, perfect for the older preschooler who wants to start identifying and gardening. The author is careful to include a wide ranging assortment, and with these wonderful illustrations, you can't go wrong with this little gem. This and the companion book Look! Birds! are both treasures and must haves for any toddler or preschooler with an interest in the natural world.
