LINA HANSON is a celebrity makeup artist who has worked with some of Hollywood's hottest names. She lives in Los Angeles.

I...ugh....Going to her site to get info is MUCH better than buying this book. You don't get anything a quick internet search of words like "eco-beauty" "conscience beauty" "homemade recipes for dry/oily/combo skin" can't give you. It's the Ultmate Guide to----ZZzzzzzz. There were no special makeup artist techniques for natural beauty products, no interesting tips (in my opinion), no unique recipes, no details on....anything! It was like a quick run through pocket guide they blew up into a standard size book. I really wanted to love and re-read this book...oh well, to the library you go.

Nice book at nice price.

Very disappointing. Not really that eco. Not impressive. I would prefer more on wild-crafted and home-made approaches to beauty care.

Add it to your go-to list for natural skincare. Filled with beauty advice, from what are the top foods for glowing skin to skincare advice for different skin types, the book is filled with great tips. It's along the lines of the Green Beauty Guide but more compact and fun to read. Worth purchasing even if you have other "eco beauty" books. If you want great eco-beauty advice ASAP check out Christy Coleman's site- lots of great "green beauty" info.

While I wouldn't call this an "ultimate guide" this is an excellent starter guide to eco-friendly beauty 5 years later. I recommend it for it's recipes (straight out of the kitchen most of the time) and easy to understand beginner knowledge/jargon all packed into a tiny book. Sometimes books are for beginners and that is 100% ok people. We all have to start somewhere. My suggestion for those wanting more is to look into the resource guide that is in the back of the book. There are plenty of more places to go check out and dig in.

I just received this book as a gift from my boyfriends sister and WOW WHAT A GREAT READ!! This book is filled with so many useful tips. I learned a lot and was vastly entertained at the same time. I recently checked out the authors website ([...]) and was so excited to see that she also has a great blog. I highly recommend this book to everyone!!Connie
